As the traditional views of management and leadership change, leaders are assuming more of the responsibility for ensuring ethical conduct within the organization. Leaders have the choice and the opportunity to influence followers, processes and outcomes ethically; therefore, it is imperative that the organization instill a sense of what ethical behaviors are expected of its leaders. With your fellow classmates, you will explore ethical guidelines and how to use ethical thinking as a leader in the University.

Register for any of these classes at www.training.unc.edu or by calling 962-2550. All classes are free and open to staff and faculty. Follow us on Facebook and Twitter!